

CTSA Program KL2 Scholar in the News:

Defining the molecular changes responsible for brain repair after stroke:

- Blood test early after stroke can predict which patients will recover significant arm/hand function
- Findings will help to design drugs that enhance natural brain repair mechanisms after stroke

“We currently have few treatment options for stroke patients after the first several hours following injury. This research holds great promise to develop a recovery drug that can restore more patients to independence...”

Matt Edwardson, MD

National Center
for Advancing
Translational Sciences