

GHUCCTS to co-sponsor first international conference in Systems and Network Medicine at Georgetown University

MAY 06, 2019 - The Georgetown-Howard Universities Center for Clinical and Translational Science (GHUCCTS), in partnership with several other research centers and university departments, is proud to co-sponsor the first international conference dedicated to the emerging field of systems medicine. Beginning on Wednesday September 11, 2019, the Systems and Network Medicine Conference: Applications of Systems Science and Thinking to Biomedicine (SNMConf) will offer workshops, panel discussions, paper presentations, and interactive sessions designed to showcase the science of systems medicine and how this field is changing healthcare.

Early registration rates are available now through May 31, 2019. For more information, including abstract submission guidelines and a tentative conference agenda, please visit the SNMConf2019 website.
