

CTSA Program KL2 Scholar in the News:

Molecular Imaging to reduce cancer recurrence following surgical resection:

- We have identified potential imaging targets
- Our focus is to exploit how tumor heterogeneity and differing tumor microenvironments could be harnessed through molecular imaging to develop improved methods for early cancer detection, diagnosis, treatment and prognosis.

“Integrating molecular imaging into the surgical management of gastrointestinal malignancies will improve disease free and overall survival for these patients”

Chukwuemeka Ihemelandu MD,
FACS

Georgetown-Howard Universities Center for Clinical and Translational Science
CTSA Program Grant UL1TR001409 and KL2TR001432

National Center for Advancing
Translational Sciences